Long Heralded Hun Secret Weapon Smacks Of Nazi Desperation

Peculiar Build
Their only distinctive feature is a cylindrical tube raised lengthwise on the rear end of the fuselage as if the tail had been swung inward—in other words, like a telescopic sight affixed to a rifle. The tube, either rocket or jet propulsion, thus reinforcing the nose engine.

The robots crossed the channel at two to three hundred miles per hour. In many cases searchlights spotted them for targeting.

The general consensus is that they are launched from a catapulting platform, but that once in the air it is difficult to control them. They cannot pinpoint even a large target, thereby adding new proof that the Nazis are guilty of indiscriminate bombing methods.

Early End Seen
LONDON, June 17—If all goes well the life of the pilotless plane used by the Nazis will be short, the British press believed today.

The Times said "militarily the new weapon cannot have the slightest effect on the course of the war. To suppose that the British people, cheered by the success of the Allied forces on every front, will be in any degree shaken by sporadic and random attacks not to be compared with those which they suffered in 1940-41 alone is to court derision."

The Daily Telegraph pointed out that "resort to pilotless aircraft is a confession of impotence by the Luftwaffe. Pilotless is the word for German airplanes as well as planes. Blight blows of despair may inflict some damage on us, but they confirm that we have only to 'carry on' and victory is assured."

The Daily Mail recalled that "Germany has tried many surprises on us in this war including the magnetic mine, radio directed tanks, super-submarines, new guns of many kinds, flame throwers, and a host of other scientific devices to which we found such speedy answers that their value to the enemy is almost negligible."

The Daily Express declared "The British people will not demand protection at home to the detriment of the major task abroad. For them success of the second front is the short way to the destruction of Nazi Germany and all its tricks of war."

Local Allied successes were scored against heavy German resistance near Caumont and Tilly-Sur-Seuilles.

German Panzer units arriving to strengthen the Nazi front were reported arriving at only half strength due to the intensity of Allied aerial attacks on communications routes.

East of Caen, two German counter-attacks at Escoville and Barneville were beaten off with heavy losses. South of Caen, an Allied advance was scored along the Vire river.

Allied Fifth and Eighth armies surged forward in Italy to points less than 70 miles from Florence.

Japs Pushed Back
In the Pacific, jungle hardened veterans of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Sixth army hurled back three tank-paced Jap counter-attacks as they prepared to drive on the second strategic airbase on Biak Island. Mortar and bazooka fire broke up the enemy thrusts and destroyed two of the three tanks employed.

American landing forces battling on the Japanese inner defense ring at Saipan, in the Marianas, resumed their advance after a temporary check.

An estimated 30,000 Jap troops are defending Saipan. American invasion plans were drawn with a strong defensive garrison in view.

Land based planes of the Fifth air force were revealed to have struck the Jap base at Yap, some 400 miles northwest of Palau, leaving the airfield runway pitted with bomb craters and setting fires in ground installations.

Three South American Countries Bolt U. S. Stand Against Bolivia

Latin American diplomats explained that the issue is urgent because of the approaching elections in Bolivia, July 2. From the Latin American viewpoint, recognition should come before that time. But it is understood that Secretary of State Hull has urged delay until after the elections, to be sure that Fascist or unfriendly elements are not brought back into power.

But such delay, diplomats pointed out, would put the American governments in the position of judging the validity of free elections in a neighbor country—and this would be offensive to that country.

The Brazilian ambassador, Carlos Martins, called yesterday on Secretary Hull, in what was believed to be the final conference before Brazil, Venezuela, and Colombia take the step of recognition.

It is understood that Hull agreed that, though the United States still refuses to take the leadership, this government will recognize Bolivia after the others have done so.

DECISION NEAR ON PRICE BILL

In their first meeting the conferees settled the subsidy issue, which had been expected to provoke the most bitter fight in the effort to extend the price control act.

The conference adopted the Taft amendment which ends subsidies June 30, 1945, unless authorized by congress. It also accepted the Wolcott amendment which prohibits further agricultural subsidies during that period. The effect is to limit "roll back" subsidies for the next year to meat, butter, bread, flour and milk. Support price subsidies can be continued.

Rent control, procedure and court review amendments, some of which are bitterly opposed by OPA, also are in dispute.

Some conferees were optimistic, however, over chances of agreeing on a bill which President Roosevelt will sign. Wagner said he thought it was possible to avoid a presidential veto.

YOUTH INJURED AS HAY TRUCK BURNS ON ROAD

Carl Mace, 20, South Scioto street suffered second degree burns across his shoulders and arms and a truck belonging to Elmer Wolf with 90 bales of hay were burned at 5 o'clock Friday evening on State Route 56 near Leisville when a tire blew out and the truck turned over and caught fire.

Harry Brown step-father of Mace, was driving the truck on which the hay was loaded and was bringing it to the Elmer Wolf stables in West Mound street. He was not injured.

Gasoline escaping from the burst tank ignited and set fire to the truck and its contents. Mace was burned before he could escape from the wreck.

Defenbaugh's ambulance removed the injured youth to Berger hospital where he was placed under the care of Dr. C. O. Kerns.

FINNS' OUSTER SHOCKS CAPITAL

(Continued from Page One) who have known Procopio for years declared they did not believe he merited any such accusation. They said his conduct during the period when Finland was at war with America's ally, Russia, had been most circumspect.

These circles also recalled that at the time of Russia's previous attack on Finland November 30, 1939, Procopio was called to the White House for a 45-minute consultation with President Roosevelt, after which the President told his news conference that Russia's action was a "profound shock."

He added that "the people of Finland have a long honorable and wholly peaceful record which has won for them the respect and warm regard of the people and the government of the United States."

Shortly afterward, congress appropriated additional funds to the export-import bank for the expressed purpose of permitting credits to Finland to buy equipment for her defense. A total of 35 million dollars was allocated, of which 26 million was actually drawn.

Observers saw the possibility today that Finland may be defending herself with equipment purchased with these credits against attack by Russia, who may be using lend-lease equipment from the United States.

The American government in recent months, however, has been futilely urging Finland to quit the war as Germany's ally against the Soviet Union and several weeks ago the state department placed eighty-four Finnish firms on its blacklist.

Procopio and his staff have operated under severe restrictions for several months. They have not been permitted to issue news releases, to publish bulletins, to summon reporters to a conference, or in any way to defend Finland's position.

Their personal movements have been restricted, and permission of the state department has been required before they could leave Washington.

In fact, it was just such an errand that brought Procopio to the state department yesterday. He intended to ask permission for a staff member to leave town for a few days. But he was met at the diplomatic entrance and escorted to the office of George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, who handed him the passports for himself and three counselors.

This came on the day following Procopio's action of presenting a

ONE DIES, FIVE HURT IN FIRE AT RACE TRACK

DETROIT, June 17—One man was burned to death, five were injured and several others may be missing in a fire which destroyed 32 horses and razed two barns at the Detroit race track within 45 minutes early this morning.

The total estimated damage was $225,000. Loss of the horses was estimated at $200,000 and the barns and equipment were valued at $25,000.

The Ferguson stable lost all of its horses including Bell Buzzer, the three-year-old colt which carried Ferguson's colors in the Kentucky derby last year. Also lost were Wise Colors, Black Skimmer, My Myri, Great Scot and Coffee Man.

Positive identification of other horses lost in the blaze awaited a check by trainers and stable owners.

A groom in the Ferguson stable told how he awoke, smelled smoke and led Bell Buzzer from his stall to safety. Spectators said, however, that the Derby horse then became panicky and bolted back into the burning structure where it perished.

Track officials said there was a strong possibility that other stable employees still were in the ruins of the barns. Search of the cinder area continued today when trainers reported that a number of their men were not accounted for.

Bits on Books

By Enid Denham

"Report on War and Post-War Adjustment Policies"—Here is a very timely and much discussed book. There is scarcely an issue of a periodical of 1944 that does not contain some information on Bernard Baruch or his Report on War and Post-War Adjustment Policies of February 15, 1944. Baruch is the man called on to comment on those first price-fixing bills before the House Banking and Currency Committee, in 1941. His idea was to put a "ceiling" over the whole price structure, and ignored, in a bill that passed. For that we have the present rise in cost of living, where certainly Baruch's plan would have checked inflation. It is to undo this mess of war economy, strikes, farm subsidy fights, and higher taxes, that Baruch was assigned to the Office of War Mobilization, to "study war and postwar adjustment problems."

The report that came out of that study is one that should be

A Good Soldier of Christ Jesus ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—II Timothy By Alfred J. Buescher

Timothy, beloved of Paul to whom he referred as his son, gets a letter from Paul who wrote it while he was in prison in Rome.

When Onesiphorus was in Rome, Paul wrote, he was not ashamed that Paul was in chains, but sought him out and visited him in prison.

"Preach the word," Paul writes Timothy in his letter; "be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine."

Before Paul's last trial before Nero, he wrote, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. GOLDEN TEXT—II Timothy 2:3."

read and studied by all. Baruch has been called the "greatest exponent of two times two makes four," or "Mr. Facts". Certainly he knows them. His picture is not always pleasant, but the problems are there, and he has very reasonable solutions to many of them.

With Mr. John Hancock his co-author, he has the great question "with peace, what?"

There is a certain unity in time of war; individuals look to leaders, less important projects yield to the "cause". With peace, however, governmental aid and direction must take its place. It is to fill this need for direction, to offer suggestions and plans for the reconversion to peace-time industry, that these two men have presented this report. It is clear from the document that much planning is being done, and that Wall Street and big business are determined to be the ones to do it. It is interesting to note that two great factions, labor and agriculture, are not to be consulted in the handling of demobilization problems, something that the Murray-George bill for the establishment of an Office of Economic Demobilization have taken into consideration.

Three great issues discussed and planned for in the report are, the reconversion program involving the termination of war contracts, the use of surplus materials available, and the use of our returned men and women from the armed services. There are such heartening bits of information in the report as that about 80 of our war-time industry can be shifted to peacetime occupations without costly retooling, that much of the material now being produced has a peacetime market, that government operation of war plants should be discontinued lest they compete with private industry. It is now up to Congress to enact the legislation to follow this Baruch-Hancock through to success in our present and post-war state. It is now up to us to read this book—"Baruch and Hancock: Report on War and Post-War Adjustment Policies, February 15, 1944."

(Change of Mood)—It was England and it was wartime, so the story goes and there were three children one about your age, one a little younger, and then Paul, who was only six. An enchanting way to start an enchanting tale, "The Magic Bed-Knob, or How to be a Witch in Ten Easy Lessons," by Mary Norton. They had to leave London and life was very dull for them before they met Miss Price. Miss Price was a very nice sort. She visited the sick, and she taught piano and she sprained her ankle when she fell off a broomstick. I'm going to let you in a secret, Miss Price was practicing to be a witch. She bought the secrecy of the children with a bed knob, a magic bed knob. You just twisted it and there you were. Once there was the London police too, and once there were cannibals, but always there was adventure. A rare and fanciful tale with full pages in color by Waldo Peirce. A book for the always young. That includes parents who read aloud and find so much of charm and delight in this little book.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Safety Measures for Late Seeding and Transplanting

By DEAN HALLIDAY Released by Central Press Association

AS THE SEASON advances and hot, dry summer weather prevails seeding and transplanting operations in the Victory garden require extra care and certain safety measures.

At this time of the year all seeds should be planted deeper than they would require early in the spring. The soil should also be well firmed over the seeds to hasten germination. This can easily be done by "walking in" the seeds, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Firing can also be accomplished by tamping (but not pounding) with the hoe blade. After firmed the soil it should be lightly scratched with a rake to aid in checking evaporation of moisture. It is especially important to firm the soil carefully around plants which are being transplanted at a late date. Firing helps to eliminate air pockets around the roots of the freshly set plant. Air pockets interfere with a plant becoming established quickly and starting vigorous growth and may even result in its wilting and dying. If the earth is brought into close contact with the roots of the newly transplanted plant, new rootlets will immediately begin to grow. As illustrated, a simple method of firming in a transplanted plant is to stand astraddle of it with both feet.

Bits on Books

"Report on War and Post-War Adjustment Policies"—Here is a very timely and much discussed book. There is scarcely an issue of a periodical of 1944 that does not contain some information on Bernard Baruch or his Report on War and Post-War Adjustment Policies of February 15, 1944. Baruch is the man called on to comment on those first price-fixing bills before the House Banking and Currency Committee, in 1941. His idea was to put a "ceiling" over the whole price structure, and ignored, in a bill that passed. For that we have the present rise in cost of living, where certainly Baruch's plan would have checked inflation. It is to undo this mess of war economy, strikes, farm subsidy fights, and higher taxes, that Baruch was assigned to the Office of War Mobilization, to "study war and postwar adjustment problems."

The report that came out of that study is one that should be

REDS TRY FOR TWO IN A ROW OVER CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 17—The Cincinnati Reds today will attempt to make it at least two in a row after the decisive defeat which they handed Chicago yesterday—to the tune of 10 to 5.

Frank McCormick and Eric Tipton hit successive homers in the seventh inning off relief hurler Hi Vandenberg. Four pitchers were unable to stop the Reds who garnered 13 hits in all. Clyde Shoun received credit for the win.

BYRON NELSON TAKES LEAD IN RED CROSS OPEN

WYKAGYL COUNTRY CLUB, New Rochelle, N. Y., June 17—Byron Nelson, the long-legged Texan located at the Inverness club, of Toledo, O., today was an odds on favorite to win the 72-hole Red Cross open golf championship as the field started out on the third 18-hole round.

The former open and professional champion yesterday shot his second successive 69 on this tough par 72 course to reach the halfway point with 138 and in a deadlock for leadership with Mike Turnesa of the New York Turnesa golfing troupe.

Turnesa played his third round in 67, to be added to his opening 71, but still was regarded as strictly a dark horse behind Nelson and Jug McSpaden, the year's leading money-winner who had a second round 68 to go with his opening 71 for 139 and one stroke behind the two leaders.

Next came Sgt. Vic Ghezzi, the first day leader with a 67 who added a 73 for 140, and the next nearest to him were three strokes back with 143's. In this bracket were Ziggy Mellon and Andy La Pola.

Although no league games were played yesterday the Birds suffered a 4 to 3 defeat at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates in an exhibition fray.

Three thousand five hundred thirty three spectators witnessed the game in which Art Frantz held the National leaguers under fair control. A single by Pete Coscarart in the final inning after two were passed on balls proved to be Frantz' undoing.

The Birds garnered nine hits off Joe Vitelli in the first eight frames and got another from Xavier Rignino in the final.

ECONOMY SHOES DROP 8-4 FRAY TO PURINA TEAM

Ralston-Purina defeated the Economy Shoes in an 8 to 4 contest Friday evening at Ted Lewis Park. The game was the last one on the old schedule, a revised schedule, permitting the entrance of the Container team, starting on Monday evening. The league standing as of today shows that all teams have played eight contests. The game Friday evening saw Ken Dillman of the Feedmen hold the Shoe team to six hits, while his mates were tapping the offerings of Chuckie Hill and Charles Smith for 10 bingles. The game was marred by three misuses by the Feed team and two by the Economy boys. Hal Dean and Haddock led the Purina batsmen, the former getting three for three and the latter two for three. E. Dade and Carl Smith paced the losers, each getting two hits in

ROONEY TO GUEST
Mickey Rooney will match his exuberance with Gracie Fields when he guests on the comedienne's new Summer show Sunday. Mickey's appearance will be one of his few radio guest performances.

The two stars, in terms of the show world, should be a "natural" together. Both share the same great capacity of tireless energy and high spirits. Both are from the "trouper" school of show business. Rooney started his vaudeville playing in Brooklyn and claims his first bow before an audience at fifteen months. Gracie waited until she reached the ripe old age of seven before making her stage debut.

BEAUTIFUL DREAMER
Did you ever see a dream walking? Did you ever hear a dream talking? Those are words in a song that was popular several seasons back but they're appropriate for "Blondie's Beautiful Dreamer" Monday. Dagwood Bumstead, to the consternation of Blondie and his boss, Dithers, suddenly starts to dream and finds that the dream of the night before became reality. He dreams that he's involved in a bank holdup and winds up in jail. Sure enough, that's what happens. Other events add to the half hour of solid fun.

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN BRIDGE FAST
24—Returning a Lead
YOU MAY win the very first trick, to which your partner made the opening lead against the declarer. Or you may win a trick a little later. In either case, you will then face the question of what suit to return, and what card of it. The answer will usually depend upon whether the contract is No Trump or a suit.

If it is No Trump, and you could read your partner's lead as having been from a long suit, you should nearly always return it, since the best chance for you defenders to beat the contract will generally be by getting the little cards of that suit established as trick-takers, or maybe only one such card. Unless your reading of his lead, to show the composition of his suit, indicates to the contrary, your return usually should be your fourth-best to help him count the declarer's holding, if you hold as many as four, and your highest if you hold three or less.

Against a suit contract, if your partner had led a small card of some side suit, you usually should not return it. Usually you can infer that he led from a worthless suit because he did not want to jeopardize non-touching honors at the top of other suits. He therefore probably prefers having those suits led to him.

But what you have heard during the bidding and what you see in the dummy will help you in deciding what to do. You may see in the dummy a long suit which the declarer could set up in a round or two, and possibly a high card in some other suit which may later be an important entry for him to use in bringing in the established cards of the long suit. In such a case, it may be well to lead the suit in which you see that high card of entry, in the hope that it may be knocked out before the other suit gets set up.

Against both No Trump and suit contracts, you may have a sound reason to shift suits when you see a weak holding in the dummy, of perhaps two or three cards. Leading that suit will mean that your partner, with whatever high cards he holds, will get a chance to play after the declarer's high cards. In other words, you will be leading "up to weakness" and possibly "through strength," or at least through whatever strength the declarer has. This is good to do when you know you are leading "up to weakness," but may be very bad if you are merely leading through strength up to possible other strength, as would be the case if you were in the opening leader's position and led a suit in which the dummy is fairly strong.

When either defender has the lead after seeing the dummy, during play of a suit contract, it may become obvious that the declarer will wish to ruff some of his losing cards of a suit in which the dummy has a singleton, doubleton or blank suit. In such a situation, it is often wise to lead a trump, in order to use up one of the dummy's which otherwise could be employed for ruffing.

There are the contrary situations, in which it appears probable that your own side might gain by ruffing. Either you may have a singleton, or your partner may seem likely to be short in some suit which he could trump. In such a case, your judgment will tell you to lead such a suit.

In brief, after you have seen the dummy and the play to a trick or so, your plain ordinary hard thinking will generally guide you best regarding how to try to beat the declarer's contract or limit him to the smallest possible number of tricks.

Two Men Die In Collision On Little Walnut Creek Bridge

TRUCK DRIVERS ARE CRUSHED IN HEAD-ON CRASH

Ohio Patrolmen Blame Sharp Bend At Entrance For Fatal Accident

Two men were killed instantly Friday night about 8:10 o'clock when trucks they were driving collided on the bridge over Little Walnut creek at the Pickaway-Franklin county line on U. S. Route 23.

The dead are John Mezo, 22, of Dearborn, Michigan, who was driving a semi-trailer loaded with steel, and William A. Casto, 42, Charleston, W. Va., driving a cattle truck on which he had several horses and a mule. The mule and two horses were killed.

Dr. William A. Stoll of Chillicothe who was driving to Columbus came upon the accident shortly after it happened and pronounced both men dead.

The bodies were taken to the Graulich Funeral home, Columbus, awaiting word from relatives as to the disposition.

The truck Mezo was driving was the property of the Rogers Transport, Inc., of Detroit, Mich. Casto, a cattle buyer, was driving his own truck.

The impact was so great that the cabs of both cars were crushed. Patrolmen said that although the bridge is wide enough for two lanes of traffic, the approach from the north is sharp and it is thought that Casto, driving the cattle truck south, could not see the other truck on the bridge in time to pull over far enough to avoid the collision.

PERSONAL PLANES FOR HIGH OFFICIALS

The Douglas Aircraft Company has just finished a luxurious new plane for President Roosevelt. Major Henry T. Myers, who flew the five Senators around the world, has been out in California tuning up the plane, while the President's Filipino cook has been tuning up its kitchen.

The plane is the most elaborate thing ever to fly, has an elevator, an apartment and bath for the President's own use. Cost, approximately $750,000.

Some Administration critics are now turning an inquisitive eye on the number of Government planes kept in idleness by high Government officials. While high Government officials need planes to get places in a hurry, it is considered doubtful that they need their own personal planes, built at Government expense and kept idle most of the time.

For instance, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has his own Coast Guard plane, which he retained for his own use when he turned the Coast Guard over to the Navy. While Morgenthau unquestionably needs the plane for bond-selling trips, there has been some criticism inside the Government of the fact that he uses it for weekend trips to his home near Hyde Park, N. Y.

On one occasion, also, his plane flew all the way to the new airport at Messina, N. Y., merely to see whether the airport was safe for Morgenthau to land. He was not in the plane at the time, the pilot going alone, at considerable cost in gasoline, to test the airport.

Secretary of War Stimson has an Army plane which is kept for his own personal use — chiefly weekend trips to his home at Locust Valley, Long Island. When the weekend is over, the secretary of war usually boards his plane carrying a little paper bag of eggs given him by Mrs. Stimson so he will have fresh eggs for breakfast during the week.

Admiral Emory Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, also has had his own plane, for a time used exclusively by him, though later made available to other Maritime executives.

While cabinet members need airplanes for travel, no one quite understands why they need to keep so many personal planes idle for weeks at a time. Each plane has a crew of four men, who frequently have nothing to do except cool their heels while waiting for the week end when they will fly to Long Island or up the Hudson.

TNT-Town

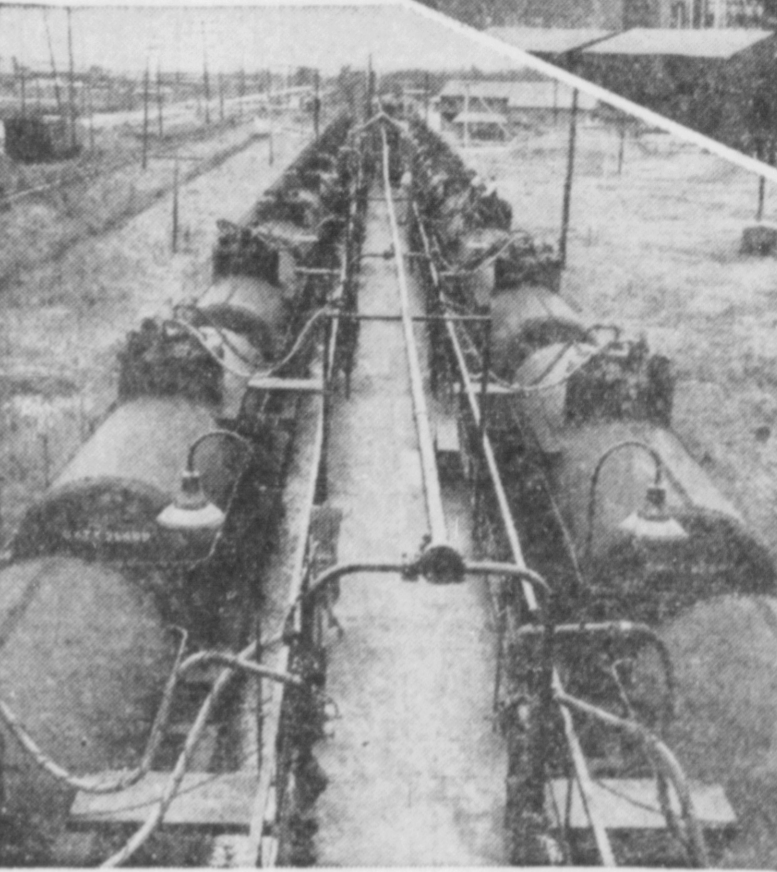

By DAVID I. DAY
Central Press Correspondent

BAYTOWN, Tex.—This is just a small town overlooking Galveston bay with a population slightly exceeding 5,000 in normal times. Yet it is making history far out of proportion to its size because it is the capital of the TNT industry of the Western Hemisphere and, maybe, of the world.

During the first year after Pearl Harbor, the town supplied two-thirds of the TNT base used by our artillery forces.

That base is toluene which mixed with nitric and sulphuric acids make the high explosive, the pale yellow stuff which give the bombs their power.

Since then, of course, many other plants have been producing toluene but busy little Baytown still heads the list. Nearly two years ago, the Humble Oil company's plant here started flying the Army-Navy "E" and it is still flying it.

Humble Oil is an affiliate of Standard Oil and when the big bombs rain on Berlin, they remind Germany of a mistake made. The process by which toluene is made from crude oil originated in Herr Hitler's own country.

There, it was designed at first in the quest for synthetic coal and probably other badly needed synthetics.

Standard Oil of New Jersey bought the American rights and started experiments. Out of this wide experimentation came first high octane gasoline, another product helping us win the war.

Before Pearl Harbor, the nation depended upon the coal tar industry for its TNT production. In the days immediately following our entrance into the war, little real uneasiness was felt.

The coal tar industry was in position to produce three times as much of this high explosive as was required in World War I. However, it developed soon that this war was a different story.

High level precision bombing at its deadliest—a stick of 500-pounders.

Much more TNT would be needed.

ed than was in sight. That is where the oil industry stepped in with the "made in Germany" process.

Whether Baytown is making good, assisted by many other TNT towns, let's take a look, as former New York Governor Alfred E. Smith used to admonish, at the records.

In one hour's time, on a single German city, have been dropped 2,000 tons of bombs. This figures up possibly to 2,750,000 pounds of TNT.

In less than two months on Berlin alone have fallen 19,250,000 pounds of it, nearly 10,000 tons.

For that matter, TNT figures in more than just bombing. It is used in land and sea mines, in depth charges, in torpedo warheads, in hand grenades, and in demolition sticks. TNT is employed in small caliber shells. The stuff called amatol used in the heavier shells is merely a blend of TNT with ammonium nitrate.

Everywhere, TNT is the major explosive of the present war and there are many good reasons for this.

TNT has greater power. It is relatively easy to make, is relatively cheap, and it is easy and safe to handle. Contrary to our popular belief, TNT can be knocked around considerably.

In a fire, it would probably just burn up in a blue flame. However, just detonate a bit of fulminate of mercury around it and it will tear up a town.

During the last war, we were short of TNT. In this, a much mightier conflict, we have plenty of it.

This is due to the experiments conducted by the oil industry, by the du Pont chemists, and possibly others — the experiments which turned the German process against its native land in the form of the most gigantic bombardment the world has ever seen.

Yes, Baytown may not be exactly famous — not even known by name to most people. But our enemies on all fronts have learned repeatedly that Baytown toluene is mighty potent.

The big $12,000,000 Humble plant here is running day and night and the wreaths of smoke around its fractionating towers are bad omens for the Axis.
